Including Critical Information Infrastructure Protection

Cooperation and Convergence for Enhancing Security

The ever changing nature of threats, whether natural through climate change, or man-made through terrorism activities, either physical or cyber attacks, means the need to continually review and update policies, practices and technologies to meet these growing demands.

Preliminary Conference Programme

Critical Infrastructure Protection and Resilience Europe brings together leading stakeholders from industry, operators, agencies and governments to debate and collaborate on securing Europe's critical infrastructure.

Welcome to Critical Infrastructure Protection and Resilience Europe

Attacks on critical infrastructure sites are a favoured target for terrorist groups, for good reason. They offer what is seen by the terrorist as a soft target, that is, maximum effect with minimal chance of interdiction. The potential effects in terms of damage, the hugely detrimental economic impact, disruption of normal daily life and resulting publicity, can far outweigh the terrorist organisations commitment in both manpower and risk.

The European Commission has adopted a communication on Critical Infrastructure Protection in the fight against terrorism, enhancing European prevention, preparedness and response in the event of terrorist attacks involving critical infrastructures.

The European Programme for Critical Infrastructure Protection (EPCIP) considers measures that will enhance the level of protection of infrastructure against external threats, with the Operator Security Plan for all infrastructures designated as European critical.

Critical Infrastructure Protection and Resilience Europe will bring together leading stakeholders from industry, operators, agencies and governments to collaborate on securing Europe. The conference will look at developing existing national or international legal and technical frameworks, integrating good risk management, strategic planning and implementation.

The European Union is developing its policy on critical energy infrastructures in relation to the European Programme for Critical Infrastructure Protection ("EPCIP") which considers measures that will enhance, where necessary, the level of protection of certain infrastructures against external threats.

The integrity of critical infrastructures and their reliable operation are vital for the well-being of the citizens and the functioning of the economy. The implementation of the EPCIP, under Council Directive 2008/114/EC on the identification and designation of European critical infrastructures and the need to improve their protection, has not been completely successful.

Why the Need for Such a Discussion?

Article 196 of the Lisbon Treaty enshrines in law that the Union shall encourage cooperation between Member States in order to improve the effectiveness of systems for preventing and protecting against natural or man-made disasters.

The Union's action shall aim to:
(a) support and complement Member States' action at national, regional and local level in risk prevention, in preparing their civil-protection personnel and in responding to natural or man-made disasters within the Union;
(b) promote swift, effective operational cooperation within the Union between national civil-protection services;
(c) promote consistency in international civil-protection work.

The ever changing nature of threats, whether natural through climate change, or man-made through terrorism activities, either physical or cyber attachks, means the need to continually review and update policies, practices and technologies to meet these demands.

2pm-4:00pm - Plenary Session: Critical Infrastructure Security and Resilience : Approaches and Case Studies from Transport, Energy & Telecomms Sectors
Transport, power and telecommunications continue to be the crucial economic lifeblood of any modern industrial economy, which have all been tested in the past year with threats from cyber attacks, terrorism and man-made threats, as well as the changing weather patterns delivering more unpredictable systems and risk of flooding. Communications infrastructure becomes key during any threat scenario to which many fail when severely damaged, limiting coordinated efforts and potentially causing damage to the economy far in excess of any physical damage they may incur. The problem for the authorities, operators and agencies is to ensure the right balance of security, safety and resilience in facilities that are widely dispersed and subject to diverse ranges of threats.

Located in the heart of one of Europe's largest urban centres, the city has excellent rail, road and internet connections with the rest of the Netherlands and Europe. With two international airports within easy reach, The Hague's accessibility and strategic location could not be better.

The Hague's current role as a focal point for international organisations and the global community is part of a tradition dating back more than 750 years. "Legal capital of the world." Former Secretary-General of the United Nations Boutros Boutros-Ghali uttered these words to describe The Hague's unique position.

The Hague is also the official seat of the Crown and government, home to hundreds of international organisations and multinationals and one of the world's top three UN cities. There are 160 international institutions and organisations in The Hague, employing more than 14,000 people who are committed to working towards a safe and secure world.

Cyber Security Capital

The Hague has become Europe's cyber security capital. Many influential cyber security organisations are based in The Hague area, including the National Cyber Security Centre, the European Cyber Crime Centre, the NATO Communications and Information Agency, Europol, and the Defence Cyber Command. Also, many large and niche businesses and knowledge institutions in cyber security, including the Cyber Security Academy, have come to The Hague and are united in the Dutch security cluster.

The Hague Security Delta

The Hague Security Delta (HSD) is the largest security cluster in Europe. In this Dutch cluster, businesses, governments, and knowledge institutions work together on innovation and knowledge in the fields of cyber security, national and urban security, protection of critical infrastructure, and forensics. They have a common goal: more business activity, more jobs, and a secure world. The HSD Campus, the national innovation centre for security with living labs, education and training facilities, flexible office space and meeting rooms, is based in The Hague. Businesses, governments and knowledge institutions from across the country collaborate at the HSD Campus to develop knowledge, products, and services that contribute to a safer and more secure world. The Campus is the inspiring meeting place for entrepreneurs, students and professionals in the security cluster. In The Hague region alone 400 security businesses operate and employ 13,400 people.

PROTECTION & RESILIENCE ASIA

including Critical Information Infrastructure Protection

15th-16th June 2016
Bangkok, Thailand
www.cip-asia.com

Save The Dates

Southeast Asia has seen a rise in insurgency-related attacks and terrorist activities, creating uncertainty and insecurity on critical national infrastructure.

Climate change has also seen more extreme weather patterns, creating additional hazardous, unseasonal and unpredictable conditions and a severe strain on infrastructure.

On a country level, there are strategies to deal with infrastructure protection issues. On a regional level, there is the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Agreement on Disaster Management and Emergency Response (AADMER), under which several teams have been set up to deal with disaster management in general, but none is geared towards the protection of critical infrastructure.

Cyber security is also becoming more prevalent, and as more critical infrastructure becomes connected to the internet and exposed to the dangers of cyber security attacks, new strategies and systems need to be developed to mitigate these threats.

Critical Infrastructure Protection and Resilience Asia will bring together leading stakeholders from industry, operators, agencies and governments to collaborate on securing Asia.
